There is a diisposition on the part of many anglers to apply the habits to which they themselves are accustomed to fish. This is illogical, but fairly constant and is a general error which has been refuted time and again. For instance; how many times have you heard an old fisherman say. "I always fish in the early morning, until about nine o'clock, then lay off until noon. After fishing awhile, I stop again until about 5 o'clock, then resume the sport until dark. Think of it! Conventional breakfast, luncheon and dinner, and all in an attempt to make helpless fish observe the dictates of society. As a matter of fact, fish feed whenever the spirit moves them. Not having the confidence of the denizens of the water, we cannot say what guides their appetites, but sometimes they will not bite at all, during the day, then suddenly, they will fight each other to take any kind of bait that is offered.

Catish may have received the descriptive name on account of their nocturnal proclivities. In a certain lake in Kansas, owned by a club, well stocked as to fish and creature comforts for mere man, a whole day has gone by without any reward for the moon came up, about 10 o'clock at night, it was the custom for the oats to go out with their fishermen and with hooks not more than a foot below the luminous float, great catches of the real, imported Potomac cat were made. The cattash would fall over each there to get to the minnows, and seemed to cruise just below the surface. They kept this up all night long. The following places bear the reputation of being good fishing grounds. (1)

The following places bear the reputation of being good fishing grounds: (1)
"The Parlor," a pool above Boiling Rock, straight out from Fletcher's. The water is deep and swift, and the pool bears its name because the fish are known to congregate there. (2) Middle Rock, above the Chain Bridge. It is well to arrange to have a boat taken up on the flood tide, as it is impossible to make headway against an ebh iide. (3) "The Hens and Chickens," off the point of the powerhouse near Fletchers; water 40 to 50 feet deep and very wift. Care must be exercised. (4) Near the "Ladder," at the Chain Bridge, opposite the branch on the Virginia side. (5) Opposite the point of Analostan Island, along the bend of the river. Water about thirty feet deep. (6) Near the Thurston steel plant, at junction of Potomac and Eastern Branch. (5) The Tidal Basin. Boats and bait may be obtained at the Speedway boathouse, at the western end of the basin. (8) The Dyke between Alexandria and Mt. Vernon Boats may be obtained at the following places: Reynolds' Baileys, and Miller's; usually, at the fishing tackle stores.

Insanity Experts to Urge Prevention Measures

CHICAGO, July 14.- The waste of the system by which States spend as high as 40 per cent of the total State budget in the care of dependents, chiefly in-sane, while almost nothing is done to prevent mental diseases, will be dis-cussed by the medical scientists and sociological experts attending the third annual convention of the alienists of the United States, which opened at the Hotel La Salle here today.

There has been no doubt Manners' great object in life seems to be to convince humanity through the medium of the play that the eternal comedy feminine is not so gosh-hanged eternal after all. He has emancipated the simple, bread-and-butter—shall we call it bone-head?—comedy heroine. The simplicity had reached a state where it was just a bit curdled. The long continued use of the bread-and-butter type had rendered it stale and rancid, and the bone-headedness was maddening. So J. Hartley Manners has come to the rescue. The distinction between his and the thereotyped heroines might compare to the differences between the terms feminine and female—just about.

Her Giri is of a piece with the other excellent things she has done—maybe a little more excellent. A. H. Van Buren as George Hemming, the man with a leaning toward criminals, has something to do entirely outside his usual line of standard leading-man business—and he does it well. He made the pattern by originating the character in the first production of the piece and he ought to know how to do it. As the Father of the Girl, Everett Butterfield has one of the most carefully studied and artistically conceived character parts he tistically conceived character parts he has ever done before a Washington au-dience. And this is about as far as we can go, because Mr. Butterfield has done a great many very good things

The others in the cast were so well up to the high standards that were set by the three that have been picked out by the three that have been picked out for special mention that it was necessary for those three to be exceptional in order to merit extra consideration. The settings and production, as usual, were their own commendation of the work of Stage Director Ritchie and Scene Painter Squires—the prologue in the rain being especially and unusually effective. This, by the way, is half missed by late comers, as the curtain is raised on the opening of the piece with unusual promptness this week.

How English Beauties Keep Faces Youthful

Christian Miller, F. C. I., noted English health expert attributes the early aging of American women mainly to the "national nervouences." The women of England, she says, can teach us the inestimable lesson of repose.

Another valuable lesson to be learned from the English woman is that she does not go in much for cosmetics, the continual use of which must ruin any complexion. The beauty devotees of King George's realm have the mercolized wax habit, a more wholesome method of keeping the face girlish-looking and healthy. Ordinary mercolized wax, used like cold cream, rejuvenates the worst complexion. Women here may easily acquire the habit, this wax heing obtainable at drug stores generally in the United States and Canada. It is applied at night and washed off in the morning. One ounce is sufficient to completely renovate a had complexion. It has a peculiar action in keeping the face free from the particles of dead and devitalized scarf skin which are constantly appearing.—Advt.

The production of "The Girl in Waiting" by the Columbia Players, up to which all this has been leading, is also evidence of the fact that no matter how much the playwright might yearn to dramatize an idea or what originality he might utilize in drawing his characters, it is absolutely essential for him to have men and women of intelligence to interpret his writings. And Mr. Manners could find few companies better qualified for the job than the company at the Columbia. While all the diverse elements of the play were capably handled there were three of them that seemed to stick out a bit more prominently than any of the others—the Girl, how were the foreing us sorry that we have herefore, there is absolutely no "ready money"—ready to spend—in the entire pleose. COSMOS

The Cosmos Theater this week has one of those good bills with a jump in it from the outset. Miss Petronella is a real violinist, and her selections are entertaining The Five Bragdons have a laughable novelty which won applause. A Melody Trip is a musical offering entitled "A Night at the Club," while Bond and Cassor, late stars of "Arcadia," were accorded an ovation in "Songland," the Adeline Denette Trio of fine dancers were close behind, and the Schaller Brothers do some remark ably clever acrobatic work. The day time finds the picnic crowds flocking to the park—the number of special picnic parties increasing with every week. And these picnickers find Glen Echo unique in that the mothers of families can leave their children at the playgrounds where they will find all sorts of innocent amusement and not be a tax on their parents or spoil the grown folks day.

Directors and assistant instructors of the playgrounds department were advised this morning by Miss Ellen Hope Wilson, assistant supervisor, that they must take no part in the activities until July 16, by which time it is expected that Congress will have passed a second continuing resolution, for the expenses of the District government.

Their services cannot be accepted owing to the law which prohibits the acceptance of personal services by the Government without compensation. The caretakers, however, are under annual salary, and there are sufficient funds on hand to pay them until July 16. In the meantime, it was decided that it would be better to operate them part of the day with a limited force rather than close them altogether. The total average attendance at the playgrounds is 5,000.
